LAST TRIBUTE PAID TO EDWARD VII

London's Streets Filled as Never Before, Either at Festival or Funeral

NINE SOVEREIGNS IN THE PROCESSION

Bright Sunshine After a Night of Thunder Storms that Swept the Capital and Soaked the Magnificent Funeral Decorations-Simple Service at St. George's Chapel Said by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York.

Bright sunshine followed a night of Bright sunshine followed a night of thunder storms that swept the city and soaked the funeral decorations of royal purple, the half-masted flags and the wreaths of evergreens and flowers that hinug along the line of march, but had no deterrent effect on the gathering thousands who from midnight until dawn sought points of vantage from which to watch the passing of the tortege.

A Spectacle of Magnificence.

A Spectacle of Magnificence.

London's millions filled the streets and open places, as they have never before filled them, either at a funeral or a festival. All the pageantry that marked the burial of Queen Victoria was as naught when compared with the magnificence of today's spectacle, which, though it passed through a multitude of hushed people, reverently bent, was splendid in its accompainents of gilded coaches, brilliant uniforms and decorations.

The Procession.

The Procession. Far surpassing the ceremony attend-ing the removal of the king's body from Euckingham palace to Westmin-ster hall, the procession today includ-ed nine sovereigns, the former presi-dent of the United States, Theodore Boosevalt who slove was unarrayed in Roosevelt, who alone was unarrayed in uniform; the heirs to several thrones, the members of the royal families, the officers of the households, the officials of the government, field marshals, generals and admirals, whose names are synonymous with Britain's achievements in war; detachments of troops of all the British arms, and representatives of foreign arms; and navies in the varies and navies in the variegated uniforc, a solid phalanx of gittering colors.

Telling of Bells, Booming of Minute The lines of red-coated soldiers were those in old Trinity thrawn as on that other great occasion of England's mourning, nine years ago, with arms reversed and regimental flags dipped to the ground. The vast throngs along the streets were massed so tight that those once caught found it impossible to move. The great the head of the center aisle. Heavily draped in black and purple, the same pew was the only varant one in the church today. Admission was by card only, but the sympathetic and curious general public blackened the streets outside and the overflow was through this multitude, from among emblems, were banked high with people: balconies and windows were crowded, the roof-tops black. And through this multitude, from among whom not a whisper arose, the gun carriage that bore the king's body moved to the strains of funeral marrines, the tolling of bells and the booming of minute guns—very different from many another day when Edward in the giory of his reign went to meet in the glory of his reign went to meet his people and be acclaimed.

Westminster hall the widowed a going to spend a last few min-beside the body of the king, was assisted from her carriage by the German emperor, upon whom the loss of his royal uncle has lain heavily. The emperor kissed the hand and cheek of Alexandra, and passed her to her son, king George. Then she entered the itall with King George, Emperor William and the Duke of Connaught, there to offer a silent prayer and watch the removal of the coffin to the gun cartage.

What Impressed Mr. Roosevelt Most.

London, May 20.—Sovereigns and representatives of the powers of all the world paid last tribute today to England's great monarch, Edward VII., whose body now rests in St. George's chapel at Windsor cactle, where the bones of Edward IV., the sixth and eighth Henrys, Charles I., and third and fourth Georges and William IV. are entombed.

From Paddington Station the royal train carried the coffin and mourners to Windsor, while special trains were filled with officials and foreign representatives. Bluejackets dragged the gun carriage through the line of people to St. George's chapel, and there simple services were said by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, assisted by other prelates. King George with Alexandra on his arm walked up the nave behind the coffin, with the German emperor and Queen Mary fol-

Sovereigns Begin to Depart Today. Several of the royal mourners, in-cluding Archduke Francis Ferdinand of Austria and Prince Charles of Swe-den left London tonight, but all the reigning monarchs remain, and the king and queen had another notable dinner party at Buckingham palace this evening. The departure of the sovereigns will begin tomorrow, but the German emperor is expected to stay here until Monday night.

A LIBERAL EDUCATION FOR ALL

The Averlean citizen who reads a live daily paper regularly will soon find that he has attained through it a liberal education. The fact is, the newspape, has become so eelectic in its make up that most of the magazines of the country have been obliged to resort to muck-raking and sensationalism in order to live, as well as to carry every kind of a humbug in the way of postal order business and advertising false pretences. It makes no difference whether it is exploration in Egypt or the Arctic regions, hunting in Africa, the opening of Thibet, the earthquakes in Costa Rica, Halley's comet coursing the sky at 1.900 miles an hour, or new celestial distances or evidences of a universe of suns and worlds ever against this one of ours which has been thought to be the only universe, it is fully exploited and discussed from day to day by the press of the country. Every advance made in religious, science or government is promptly chronicled. By the electric telegraph the whole world has become internationalized and to a degree interdependent and new words are being added to our language almost daily and the present generation is the best read generation the world has ever known; but those only belong to the modern world—the world of thought and action except those who read up—who know what the concreted yesterdays of the world bear upon their face.

The work of the association for the next year was presented by General Secretary W. A. Morse. Mr. Case told of the success of this method of raising money as demonstrated in Massachusetts cities where a millim and a half was raised last fall. Chairman Cranston explained the working details of the plan and each of the 20 men present proceeded to make up his list to be called upon.

The sum of $6,000, when raised, will wipe out the $1,500 deficit of last year existing at the beginning of the present administration, and also provide for the current running expenses for this year and some necessary repairs. It is expected to have all the money and pledges in by the end of the week and each day the sum raised and the standing of each committee is posted in the association rooms. Each evening at 6.30 the men in the campaign meet for a luncheon which is to be furnished by the ladies of the different churches. On Friday evening the following ladies looked after the luncheon: Mrs. J. B. Oat and Mrs. Minple Amburn of First Baptist, Mrs. Elizabeth Reid, Mrs. Addle McIntyre of Greeneville Congregational, Mrs. W. H. Potter and Mrs. George H. Stead of First Congregational. On Monday evening the lunch is in charge of the ladies of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, On Thursday evening the Park church ladies are in charge.

law provides a maximum penalty of tors planned to place them in an imtwo years in prison, a fine of $5,000, or both. The former governor took a big roll of bills from his pocket and paid his fine without comment. The raid followed a report to the police by railroad employes that the girls were held as prisoners. When released they explained they had met Hirsch about two weeks ago in Boston. When they accepted an invitation to take a sail, they said, he took them aboard the barge and locked them in the cabin. If the Boston authorities ask for the men they will be surrendered, or they may be turned over to the federal officers because one of the charges deals with an offense alleged to have been committed on the high

Arguments of Counsel.

Mr. Rollins' lawyer argued for him that, owing to his wife's illness, he had been worried and pre-occupied, and that when the customs agents falled to furnish him with the blue form which contains the law with regard to purchases abroad, he had made a natural error of omission. District Attorney wise contended that Mr. Rollins declared one dutiable article, and instanced further that he had been abroad before and was familiar with the law. Moreover, an additional opportunity to amend his declaration was given him. of which he declined to avail himself.
